Leader Says Z. O. A. Policy Is Never To Commit Itself To Party Or Candidate

The United States has "shamefully" submitted in some respects to the Arab economic boycott of Israel, an Ohio rabbi charged recently at the sixty-third annual convention of the Zionist Organization of America.

Rabbi Joseph P. Sternstein, of Dayton, national education chairman of the Z. O. A., told delegates at the Hotel Statler-Hilton that the U.S. was abdicating its leadership by not "thwarting this shaft at American sovereignty." He was referring to the boycott by the Arab nations of business and shipping firms dealing with Israel, and he said that the United States had, in effect, condoned the practice by not actively opposing it.

The State Department would "play into the hands of Communism and totalitarianism" if it turned away from the rank discrimination in the Middle East," he said, reports the New York Herald Tribune. The Rabbi, who presided at the second plenary session of the gathering, said: "Blinding oneself to the ignominious and humiliating discrimination of American citizens simply because they are members of a particular faith is as fatal today as it was in the days of Munich."

Another speaker, Shimshon Arad, an Israeli Consul in New York, called the Arab boycott "just another weapon in their war against Israel." He termed the measure "monstrous, hostile, and illegal" and urged a Zionist public education program to point up the "success stories of Israeli industries" and the economic stability of that nation.

He admitted that the boycott has had some effect, but warned against publicizing it because to do so, he said, would only encourage the Arab countries to put more effort and money into it.

In a discussion that followed, one of the delegates, Elias Gilner, of 150 Crown Street, Brooklyn, produced a letter from the Arab government of Kuwait to a business man asking him to present certification "by competent governmental authorities" to the effect that his firm does not have business dealings in Israel.

Mr. Gilner charged that this procedure is widespread and that the State Department does not provide such certification on request, says the New York Herald Tribune. Reached for comment in Washington, Lincoln White, U.S. State Department press officer, said that if a business firm in any country asked a United States consulate for a certificate of this sort, the consul, acting as a notary public, could certify that the company representative had made a sworn statement to the effect that his firm does not deal with Israel.

"The consular service is in the field to help American business," he said. "This doesn't mean that we necessarily condone the boycott."

The Z. O. A.'s annual "man of the year" award was given to Harold Carmely, of Brooklyn, convention chairman, and the Brooklyn Region was cited as the most outstanding of the twenty-two regions. Special Sessions Justice Albert D. Schanzer of that borough accepted the Region award.

A leader of the Zionist Organization of America who emphasized the nonpartisan and nonpolitical character of the organization was Dr. Emanuel Neumann, who twice headed the Z.O.A. and is now its honorary president. He hailed the "magnificent address" of Senator John F. Kennedy on the problems of Israel and the Middle East. Dr. Neumann termed Senator Kennedy's address an "impressive and significant utterance which confirms the fact that there is a basic unity in America regarding our national policy of friendship for Israel."

However, Dr. Neumann added, in view of "the tense atmosphere of an election year, it is well to restate our traditional policy clearly and unmistakably." He said the Z. O. A., representing a large number of various political views throughout the U.S., "has never committed itself to any party or any candidate for office, and we are similarly uncommitted at this time."

He said Zionism's cause "has had sincere and vigorous support among leaders and spokesmen of both parties", says the New York Times.

Other Zionist leaders made a number of recommendations concerning the recently proposed overall Jewish body that would act on Jewish problems and issues in the U.S.

Rabbi Max Nussbaum, chairman of the organization's national executive council, called attention to what he termed the "weakened position of many Jewish communities abroad, the resurgence of neo-Nazism, the difficulties that Israel faces." He added that this calls for "a unified voice of the American Jewish community."

Rabbi Ira Eisenstein, prominent Conservative Jewish leader, said the ideological differences "that once divided American Jews are no longer vital." He said that any over-all body must include "grass-roots community organizations which have grown up in the last generation."

Bernard G. Richards, director of the Jewish Information Service, Inc., a Zionist and writer on Jewish subjects, issued a statement disputing Abraham A. Redelheim, president of the Z.O.A., who said an over-all body was needed to thwart the issuance of political statements by "self-appointed spokesmen."

Mr. Richards declared that the aspiration for a central Jewish body had been endorsed by the Rabbinical Assembly of America, Jewish Conservative group, and the Synagogue Council of America. Such an endorsement by other Jewish bodies "is motivated by religious, educational, philanthropic, and related needs, and has no connection whatever with the role

Surgeon was "Most Unselfish Woman" In N.Y. Area

Dr. Genia I. Sakin, a plastic surgeon, who operated without charge on thousands of poor persons in many parts of the world, died in Massachusetts General Hospital, in Boston Mass., after an illness of several months. Her home was at 1065 Fifth Avenue, and her office at 7 East Eighty-fifth Street, both New York.

In 1957, Dr. Sakin received the Certificate of Honor of Manila Central University, for operating on many Philippine people who were deformed by war accidents, and for demonstrating her technique at the College of Medicine, says the New York Times. The preceding year, she received the Gimbel Award as the most unselfish woman from the New York area in helping others.

In 1956-57, Dr. Sakin visited Japan, where she performed plastic surgery on some of the Hiroshima atom-bomb victims and other Japanese. While there, she started a fund to educate the children of Mrs. Naka Sakai, for whose death William S. Girard, then a United States Army Specialist 3/c, received a suspended sentence on a manslaughter charge.

During World War II, Dr. Sakin served as a major in the Army Medical Corps, heading plastic surgery sections at the Ninety-seventh General Hospital at Frankfurt, Germany, and at 279th Station Hospital in Berlin.

In 1949, on invitation of the Greek Government, she went to Greece to help soldiers who were deformed by war injuries. For two years, Dr. Sakin served in Greek Army hospitals, performing many operations and instructing physicians in plastic reconstruction. She was decorated by King Paul.

Dr. Sakin then continued her work abroad, helping hundreds of deformed persons in Turkey, Israel, Brazil, Argentina, Cuba, and Mexico. Between trips, she practiced privately in the United States, accumulating enough money to finance her free work.

She was born in Lithuania and received her medical degree in 1931 from the University of Berlin, where she studied with Prof. Jacques Joseph, a noted plastic surgeon, says the New York Times. Dr. Sakin escaped from Germany in 1937, but her mother and a sister were killed by the Nazis in Lithuania. A brother was killed in a Japanese bombing of Shanghai.

Surviving are a brother, Abe Sakin, of New York; and two sisters, Mrs. Blume Iasahar-Zadeh, also of New York; and Mrs. Chana Lieberman, of Israel.

N.Y. Rabbis Report Good Jewish Life In Hungary

Two contrasting patterns of Jewish life — gloomy in Czechoslovakia and "pulsating" in Hungary — were described in New York by two American Jewish Orthodox rabbis: David Golovensky, of New Rochelle, president of the New York Board of Rabbis, the representative body of 750 Orthodox, Conservative and Reform Rabbis; and Israel Moshowitz, of Jamaica, Queens, chairman of the Board's Jewish Affairs Commission.

Both rabbis, who appeared at the Board's headquarters at 10 East Seventy-third Street, have just returned from a seven-week study of Jewish life in West Germany and the two Iron Curtain nations, says the New York Times. They gave a detailed statement on their tour and then answered a series of questions in a long interview.

Czechoslovakia, they said, "once the citadel of creative Jewish culture * * * has become a land of Jewish cemeteries, memorials, and museums." The Hitler regime, they said, had reduced the Jewish population of 200,000 to approximately 18,000 today. They quoted one disheartened Jewish leader in Prague as saying it was "a losing battle against death."

The immediate past of the Jewish population, they declared, "is saturated with anguished memories of gas chambers and mass annihilation." The survivors are "endeavoring to create out of the chaos and void which they inherited in Czechoslovakia a meaningful Jewish life."

They pointed out that the state provided financial support to churches and synagogues, paying the salaries of the religious personnel. They said a high state official had told them this was being done "not in approval of religion but rather because the state is convinced that religion cannot long endure in the climate of a society that vigorously pursues a policy of materialistic atheism."

In sharp contrast, they reported a "surprising degree of authentic and pulsating Jewish life" in Hungary. In Budapest, they said, there are "three magnificent synagogues and number of small pray-

Exhibit Depicts Hebraic Influence On U.S. Law

Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark opened an exhibition in Washington, D.C., depicting Jewish contributions to American law. The collection, on display at the Bnai Brith building, includes documents on the early Hebraic influence in American jurisprudence and personal mementos from the careers of thirty-five famous lawyers and judges of the Jewish faith.

It begins with Zalegman Phillips, believed to be the first Jew admitted to the bar in America, in 1789, and continues through the careers of Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter and Federal Circuit Judge Simon E. Sobeloff, former United States Solicitor General who argued the public school desegregation cases in 1954, says the New York Times. One woman, the late Frieda B. Hennock, former Federal Communications Commissioner, is included in the group.

The exhibition also includes items on Philip Phillips, who died in 1884 and was one of the first Jews to serve in Congress; penciled notes of Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis, and legal correspondence and a diary of Supreme Court Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo.

In opening the display, Justice Clark noted that "ever twenty-five hundred years ago Jewish fundamental law first sought to bring to reality the brotherhood of man. Today this remains as its supreme

Cal[illegible]ngster Who Gets Everything" Menace To Nation

The youngster who gets everything he wants was cited as an example of what was called America's over-emphasis on materialism.

Miss Sophie Jaffe, a sixth-grade teacher at the Israel Putnam Elementary School in New Britain, Conn., said that children must be taught that there are more important things than television sets and transistor radios, says the New York Times. Unless this is done, she warned, the nation will have produced a generation unable to make the sacrifices necessary to preserve democracy. Miss Jaffe addressed an executive council session of the annual convention of the American Federation of Teachers at the Dayton-Biltmore Hotel, in Dayton, Ohio.

In her address, Miss Jaffe, who is a vice president of the Federation, asserted that "we have gone overboard on the idea that, by giving our children the best and the most, we are making of them happy, well-rounded individuals who will grow up to be good, adaptable citizens.

"Children must learn as children that one cannot have everything one wants; that money and material abundance are not the acme of American democracy," she continued.

She said that children today had television sets in the bedrooms, carried portable or tran-

• JOINT CAMPAIGN •

For Combined Jewish Appeal and United Israel Appeal has raised $1,300,000 through advance pledges made at two major functions of the Appeals and the Rescue And Survival Fund. One event was the dinner for contributors of $2,500 and over, given by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bronfman, at the Windsor Hotel; and the other was the dinner dance at the Elm Ridge Country Club for contributors of $1,000 and over. Arthur Pascal, general chairman, said that much more money can be raised in 1960 than was in 1959 but greater efforts will have to be exerted for the goal of a 20% overall increase. At the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Bronfman, Label Katz, world president of Bnai Brith, who had just returned from an international conference in Paris of leading Jewish and non-Jewish figures who met to discuss the problem of the Jews in the Soviet Union, recounted some of the major problems affecting Jewish people abroad in which the Jewish communities of North America are particularly interested, among them the danger to Soviet Jewry of complete disassociation from the Jewish people. He stressed responsibility for the Jews who have entered Israel since it was established in 1948. Mr. Pascal said at these pre-campaign events that the Joint Campaign combines a total of 25 Israeli, national, and overseas welfare, health, and cultural agency appeals into one concerted drive. He also pointed out that many of the 25 agencies are themselves Federations composed of several vital institutions such as the Montreal Federation of Jewish Community Services. The real total is hundreds of agencies which help people in need and are supported by the Joint Campaign. He said that the aim is to increase the number of contributors from 34,336 to 36,000; and to raise $3,905,800.

CLASS IN COOKERY

APPLE STRUDEL

Dough

one and three-quarters cups flour
one egg
one-quarter teaspoon salt
one tablespoon oil
five tablespoons water

Filling

three-quarters cup butter
three pounds tart apples
sugar
one and one-quarter cups bread crumbs
cinnamon
raisins and walnuts

Beat egg, oil, and water together. Add this to flour and salt, blending it together for about fifteen minutes. Form dough into a smooth round ball and place it in a tightly-covered bowl for one hour. Then divide dough into three parts and roll each and fill each part separately. Each piece should be very thin and stretched so that it is almost transparent. Melt butter and allow it to cool. Brush each piece of rolled dough with one-third of the butter. Sprinkle the dough with the bread crumbs. Have diced apples ready and spread them over dough along with some of the raisins and chopped nuts. Sprinkle a sugar-cinnamon mixture over all. Roll as for a jelly roll, stretching it in length as you go, so that the roll is not too large. Set rolls in a greased pan and brush tops with oil. Bake for forty-five minutes at 350 degrees. When cool, cut into slices and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Mrs. Elsie Kunin,
17 Acton Avenue, Toronto.

HONEY CAKE

one cup sugar
one cup honey
one-half cup oil
one cup strong coffee
three cups flour
two teaspoons baking powder
one teaspoon baking soda
one teaspoon allspice
nuts or raisins

Beat eggs and sugar together. Add melted honey, oil, and coffee. Add flour, baking powder, baking soda and allspice which have been sifted together twice. Pour batter into a slightly-greased, nine-by-twelve inch baking pan lined with wax paper. Bake at 350 degrees for sixty to seventy-five minutes.

Israel Meets The Challenge Of Development

BY DR. JOSEPH J. SCHWARTZ, VICE-PRESIDENT, STATE OF ISRAEL BOND ORGANIZATION

It was exactly ten years ago that the Government of Israel first suggested the floating of an Israel Bond issue in the United States. Those of us who attended the meeting in Jerusalem in 1950 convened by Prime Minister Ben-Gurion were forcefully made aware of Israel's acute economic position at that time. There was a general recognition that extraordinary measures were needed to help Israel meet the staggering problem of absorbing immigrants, who were pouring in at a rate of some 250,000 per year. More than 100,000 of these immigrants were living in tents at the time of the Jerusalem meeting. It was a time of severe austerity. Food was in extremely short supply, and some foods were completely unavailable. There was no money in the Israel Treasury.

The big question was: could Israel sustain herself economically? The War of Independence had been fought courageously and successfully; the Jews of the world had been inspired by Israel's heroism, a great moment in history had brought joy and pride to our people. Yet it was by no means clear whether Israel could build a sound economy, whether she could maintain herself at a level which would make it possible to absorb hundreds of thousands of newcomers.

It was in this bleak atmosphere that the Israel Bond drive was undertaken. Only by recalling these circumstances can one arrive at an adequate appreciation of the magnitude of Israel's economic strides in the past nine years and the tremendous role which the $440,000,000 derived from the sale of Israel Bonds have played in bringing Israel within easy reach of a viable economy. In the period since September 1950, Israel has moved steadily upward on the barometer of economic growth. The year 1959, for example, was the best year in Israel's economic activity since her establishment, and was the first time since 1951 that her balance of payments showed a decided improvement.

Since Israel last observed Rosh Hashonah, the total gap in her trade balance, the difference between the value of goods and services bought and those sold by the country, was reduced by about 10 per cent, from $335,000,000 per annum to $305,000,000. Israel's exports totaled $290,000,000 in 1959, as compared with $235,000,000 in the previous year.

At the same time, Israel's exports have become greatly diversified. Israel now exports commodities to some 90 countries throughout the world. She sends diamonds and cement and raincoats to the United States, textiles to the Scandinavian countries, Switzerland and England, automobiles and trucks to Africa and Burma, and staple citrus products to almost all the European countries. New industrial crops such as peanuts, tobacco, cotton, sisal, and sugar beets are increasing from year to year, with a large share earmarked for export.

In the past nine years, Israel Bonds have enabled Israel to construct more than 255,000 permanent housing units for immigrants. Israel plans to use additional Israel Bond allocations for the erection of 160,000 permanent dwellings in the next five years, at a cost of $3,000 apiece.

Israel, with a population of more than 2,000,000, now provides 70 per cent of her food needs by her own production. In 1951, with a population of approximately 1,000,000, Israel produced little more than 50 percent of the foodstuffs consumed in the country. The total area under cultivation since that time has increased from 412,000 acres to more than 1,000,000 acres, while the irrigated area has increased from 75,000 acres to 300,000 acres.

Since 1951, more than 700 new enterprises have been established to produce machinery and equipment like lathes, drilling machines, welding equipment, cranes, lifts, agricultural machinery, and tools. In addition, over 100 new enterprises have been set up to process various chemical deposits, including potassium, chlorine, bromine, magnesium and phosphates. Mineral development is going forward in all sectors of the Negev and in the central region of the country. With the aid of Israel Bond resources, the Dead Sea Potash Works will increase its annual production of potash, bromine, and other minerals from 135,000 tons to 600,000 tons in the next decade. The phosphate mines at Oron in the Negev, unknown before Israel was created, are now producing over 250,000 tons of phosphates per year.

It is in Elath, perhaps, that Israel's history-making program of development is most excitingly dramatized. This new port, Israel's gateway to Asia and Africa, has become in its eleven years of existence a thriving town, with an oil pipeline which runs to Beersheba and Haifa. It is being developed as an industrial center, as well as a resort area.

Technical assistance for underdeveloped countries has become a major adjunct of increasing trade with Asian and African countries. More and more of these nations are coming to Israel for guidance in agricultural development and industrial "know-how." Israel has sent technical experts, plant managers, and economists to many of these nations, to help develop their economies. Among the countries which have received economic and technical assistance from Israel are: Burma, Ceylon, Ghana, Liberia, the Philippines, Sierra Leone, West Nigeria, and a number of others. Israel has signed trade treaties with some of these nations, and has entered into partnerships with others in such diversified endeavors as shipping lines, construction companies, and industrial plants.

This development represents an important asset for Israel on the international scene. In a very significant sense, it constitutes an answer to the Arab effort to isolate Israel and to throttle her economic advancement. At the same time it demonstrates Israel's effectiveness as a "showcase" for the kind of social and economic progress which may be achieved under a democratic system.

Israel's growing influence confirms our hopes from the very beginning that she might stand before the world as an exponent of the highest moral principles. This has been shown in many ways. Recently Israel revealed in a dramatic manner that she has the capacity to serve as a guardian of Jewish rights and as the keeper of the conscience of the world in its treatment of Jews. Israel will not permit the world to forget the terrible crimes of Hitlerism, and she is determined to do everything in her power to make certain that they will never recur.

At the foundation of Israel's role in the survival and reconstruction of the Jewish people is her need to attain complete economic stability during the coming years. During this period, increased economic opportunity, including full employment and permanent dwellings for her newcomers, will have to be created throughout the country. To achieve these purposes in the shortest time possible, Israel will rely heavily on Israel Bond funds.

With the aid of Israel Bonds Israel expects to fulfill major economic objectives in the coming years including the speedy industrialization of the country to increase exports and narrow the gap in the balance of payments. She plans to accelerate the exploitation of her natural resources, including phosphates, oil, copper, iron ore, and the minerals of the Dead Sea. Israel Bond dollars will enable Israel to expand agriculture and housing and the development of new industrial centers in the Negev.

Now that the Israel Bond drive has entered its tenth year, certain vital facts have been established. First, Israel has shown that she is well on the way toward achieving economic independence. Second, Israel can absorb many additional hundreds of thousands of Jews. It is now practical to speak of a population of 3,000,000 by 1970. Third, Israel Bonds have created the foundations for a long-range relationship on a business-like basis between the Jews of America and Israel.

This Rosh Hashonah, as Israel looks ahead to the tasks and opportunities of the next decade, she finds herself facing the great challenge of continued development. Israel Bonds will play a decisive role in helping her meet that challenge.

Milk, an almost perfect food, should be pasteurized to prevent the possibility of germs of such diseases as undulant fever, typhoid or paratyphoid fevers or dysentery being present in the raw milk. The local or provincial health department will supply directions for pasteurizing raw milk at home, if safe milk is not available commercially.

The mineral iron is important to the expectant mother for the production of additional blood for herself and the developing child, especially during the second half of the pregnancy. Foods rich in iron are liver, oysters, kidney, heart, tongue, and other meats. Dried legumes, dried fruits, green vegetables, wholegrain cereals, and egg yolks are also good sources.

Yom Kippur Message

BY DR. SAMUEL BELKIN, PRESIDENT OF YESHIVA UNIVERSITY, IN NEW YORK

Culminating the ten-day period of penitence after the celebration of the Jewish New Year, Yom Kippur reemphasizes one of Judaism's most enduring contributions to the ethics of civilization, the idea that man is a spiritual being. As we and our fellow Jews throughout the world spend a day of solemn prayer in the synagogue and take stock of our spiritual resources, we are reminded that material existence alone is meaningless unless it is backed by moral and ethical purpose.

Such a profound teaching has special meaning on the Day of Penitence when each of us must assess his spiritual values. It also has special meaning for an age increasingly concerned with materialism, an age that has tended to regard technological achievement as the sole yardstick for measuring progress.

For in a day's fasting and prayer, we put aside the normal rhythms of our lives and reflect on a meaning and purpose deeper than the hurried demands of everyday existence. This shift in spiritual focus can serve us well in re-examining the place we assign to material values, as individuals and as a nation. What it will enable us to see in the pressures of days after Yom Kippur are those moments of spiritual significance that make our lives meaningful.

On Yom Kippur, we pray for a future in which we are sealed in the Book of Life for another year. We must dedicate the vision of this future to our youth in whom we see it developing. As we approach the year 5721, Yeshiva University looks to the challenge of the future with resolution and unbounded confidence.

In partnership with every enlightened member of the Jewish community, the University will continue to foster the light of Torah and knowledge as a growing source of service which focuses on the spiritual force of the American Jewish community in its totality.

er chapels serving the estimated 80,000 Jews."

Communist leaders, they said, hold to the belief that atheism will strangle all religion. However, Rabbi Golovensky and Rabbi Moshowitz said many Jewish leaders had assured them that "the Jews have the opportunity and the instruments, financed at least in part by the Hungarian Government, to maintain an enduring Jewish life."

"In spite," they continued, "of the difficulties, psychological and climatic, created by a regime committed to antireligion, Judaism can be preserved," says the New York Times. Touching on Germany, they lauded the Adenauer Government for its sincerity to "treat Jews with justice, equity, and equality, and to make it possible for the returning Jews to feel at home in Germany."

sister radios to school, and at home "have only to make their desires known" to have them satisfied.

"After Christmas, today's children want to tell about the presents they got," she said. On school field trips, they brag about the money they spend. Even four-year-olds in nursery school are concerned with 'how much my dress cost' and 'my things are nicer than yours'", says the New York Times. Miss Jaffe said that teachers, parents, and other adults must shift the emphasis back to "what is right and wrong" and that they must teach children proper values by their own examples.

Finland Authorizes Sale Of State Of Israel Bonds

Through an agreement with the Bank of Finland, the Government of that Scandinavian country has authorized the sale of State of Israel Bonds in its territory, it was announced by Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, vice-president of the Israel Bond Organization. The decision of the Finnish Government to permit the launching of a campaign for Israel Bonds brings to twenty-nine the number of countries in North and South America and Western Europe in which the sale of Israel Bonds is carried on for the purpose of promoting the economic development of the State of Israel, Dr. Schwartz said.

Preparations are being made to organize a committee of leaders for the campaign in Finland which has a Jewish population of approximately 2,000, most of whom make their home in Helsinki. In making the announcement of the extension of the Israel Bond drive to Finland, Dr. Schwartz said:

"We are happy to announce the favorable action which was taken by the Bank of Finland on the eve of the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Israel Bond Organization. Within the past nine and a half years, the Israel Bond campaign has spread its activities to almost every corner of the free world as an instrument of constructive cooperation in the building of the democracy of Israel.

"The growing acceptance of our efforts is reflected in the fact that more than $450,000,000 has been invested in the expansion of Israel's economy through the channel of Israel Bonds since the launching of the first Israel Bond issue in the United States in May, 1951.

"The progress of the Israel Bond drive both on these shores and overseas has brought the Jewish communities of the free world together in a concerted program of development which is playing a role of major importance in the future of Israel. Productive investment represents a key factor in promoting the growth of Israel as a Jewish homeland as well as a vigorous and creative democracy equipped to make its contribution to the peace and progress of the family of free nations."

of Jews as citizens of the United States," he said.

Mr. Richards also declared that "there is no Jewish vote but there are Jews who vote and everything being equal, American interests being fully conserved, preference may on occasion be given to candidates or parties on account of special interests."

The convention honored Albert Schiff, industrialist, vice president and director of the Shoe Corporation of America, in recognition of fifty years of Zionist activity and leadership, says the New York Times. He was presented with a bronze plaque calling attention to his accomplishments.

Holy Day Messages Urge End To Election Bias

Herbert B. Ehrmann, president of the American Jewish Committee, declared that "we must insure the protection of civil and religious rights and guard against the inroads of bigotry. This is especially true in the upcoming national election," he said, "when the candidacy of a Catholic for the Presidency is likely to stimulate the 'lunatic fringe' of hate mongers to frenzied activity.

"Beyond guarding against specific violations of civil and religious rights, we must apply ourselves in our daily lives to the promotion of improved human relations among all groups. For only as we strive in our democracy to extend the spirit of understanding between all men, do we affirm our religious faith and our democratic creed."

Rabbi Joachim Prinz, president of the American Jewish Congress, said in a New Year message:

"We pray that in the heat of the election campaign our country maintains the unity of the American people that is the very foundation of our democracy, in the knowledge that those who would judge a man by his race, by his religion, or by any other basis than his own acts and his own qualities, do in fact subvert the democratic belief basic to our religious heritage of the sanctity of the individual.

"We pray that as the leaders of the great and small nations of the world gather, they heed the plea of men and women and children in every land for a new era characterized not by the threat of universal destruction but by the promise of universal peace, a peace enshrined with freedom."

Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, declared in his message that the moral and spiritual values of the High Holy Days could guide Americans in keeping religious prejudice out of the campaign.

"Our hope for the nation's welfare will be realized only if we keep faith with the one God, father of all, and remember His word to 'love thy neighbor as thyself'," Dr. Jones said. "In keeping the faith, we will adhere to the Judaeo-Christian heritage underlying our way of life; we will not permit the religiously prejudiced to distort the issues or to defile the election process with bigoted appeals to hate, or to deny any candidate his right to a fair campaign."
